Direct Enrollment

Students who want to branch out on their own may choose to enroll directly at a foreign university, just as they enrolled at William & Mary. Students pay the tuition charged by the host institution, and they must meet all of that institution's normal admissions requirements, including language proficiency. More care must be taken to ensure that credits will transfer properly, so students are encouraged to work closely with their academic advisor and the Global Education Office staff during the application and course selection process.
