

New Org Advisor

Glenn Williams moved here in the fall of '99 from Washington where he was involved with the CSO at Washington State University. He has been a wonderful addition to our organization. In addition to having us over for dinner and taking us boating, (most importantly) he shares great ideas during our meetings. Mrs. Hornsby still has a dinner for everyone at the beginning of each semester (see photo to the right). She continues to meet with the Campus Ministers (CaMu) and stops in regularly to meetings to inform us of community events.

Spitting watermelon seeds at Mrs. Hornsby's house. From left to right: Allison Wildridge, Riley Haggin, Owen Grimes, Melanie Schrage, Nina Emerson, Melissa Bartlett, Dave Gross

Sharing Publications

Last spring we set up an exhibit on Mary Baker Eddy in Swem Library with Sentinels and copies of Science and Health in front of the exhibit. Many copies of Science and Health were handed out while the display was there. This year, we've taken some Heralds to the language houses so they may benefit from our multicultural publications.

A note from Mrs. Hornsby

A note of admiration from the Hornsby's for the long line of precious members we have watched go by since the 50's. Current students continue the pattern of a wide variety of activities above and beyond class work. Throughout the years, the CSO membership has included the student body president, the Flat Hat editor, Phi Beta Kappa members, president aides, and dorm assistants. Students in the CSO participate in sororities,

Potato Drop

For the last two years, we helped with the "potato drop," an activity in which many religious and service groups on campus help get potatoes to the needy. In the fall of '99, we helped bag potatoes that were dropped off on huge tarps in front of PBK. Last fall, the potatoes arrived bagged and were moved from a large truck to smaller trucks with the help of Nina and Dave. We also donated money to the cause.

fraternities, vocal and drama groups, ROTC, and all the sports. Most recently we have had athletes in baseball, swimming, and crew. We even had one of our members voted All-American first team goalkeeper in soccer.

A bulletin from Boston about CSO work reminds us it blesses a broad base of the community. The alums report continued accomplishments and contributions to the community. Many have become chaplains,

Current Members

- Melissa Bartlett, sophomore, math
- Nina Emerson, sophomore, government
- Eleanor Eyster, senior, geology
- Andrew Fahrney, staff, geology department (and Eleanor's fiancé)
- Owen Grimes, freshman, history
- David Gross, sophomore, government
- Riley Haggin, freshman, history
- Melanie Schrage, freshman
- Allison Wildridge, Associate Director, Residence Life

1999/2000 Alumni

Adin Brown, Betsy Holt, Mary Kemper, Marika Macauley, Michala Stillwell-Rackham

lecturers, writers, and readers for our Cause. In addition, our alums do fine work as CEOs, lawyers, bankers, technical experts, thriving artists, elected school board members, promising parents, and in general, world-class citizens. In sum, the healing work continues in this Science of the Christ, so lovingly provided in our Manual to be active in the academic community. Thanks be to God.